Renovation of industrial heritage in Rijeka - ship Seagull (Galeb) and complex Benčić

Rijeka is a city with an industrial past, from the 18th century when first production and refinery started till the 1990s, the city grows with industry, industrial buildings, warehouses. The architectural heritage witnesses the city development, former peripheral industrial zones that are today a part of the city center, during an almost 300 year-long industrial history. The industrial identity of the city is in every street, road, rail, mole. We need to be able to use industrial heritage for teaching about the past of the city, identity, and tradition, through renovation and revitalization ruined buildings for local people and establish cooperation between cultural and scientific institution to make the best possible thing for a community.

Some of the ruined factory buildings are revitalized: first in complex Benčić, buildings from different historical periods - sugar refinery, tobacco factory, and engines factory. The first project was a revitalization of the oldest, Sugar Refinery, as Museum of Modern and Contemporary art, and ongoing project is repurposing administrative building of Sugar Refinery as future City Museum, Brick house will be Children's house and T-object from Tobacco factory period is future City library. The second one is the renovation of school ship Seagull known as Galeb, as a future city museum and hostel.

In 2020 Rijeka is the European Capital of Culture and, besides big cultural programs throughout the whole year, will have new cultural places, a cultural hub in an old industrial complex and at the old ship, places for meeting, teaching, working, creating.
